A Tale of Two: Ron and Jerry

Jerry:

Everything seems to be on hold in our lives since Ron went through the trauma of chemo/radiation therapy and now immediately afterwards having a hernia operation. If I've neglected you, my apologies. I'm sorry. Maybe soon we're get back to normal.

But don't count on it. I'm getting old. "Normal" is no longer on the table.

Tours

BUT I do have something to crow about. As you may know, I'm trying out the tour business. I've always wanted to go places and see things. It seems that once a person gets settled in, he tends to stay put and never goes to see anything that other people even drive from out-of-state to see.

We had great success with the Getty Villa Tour in Malibu last June 25. Yea. Now I'm planning for a tour to Solvang in May, 2019. In the meantime, someone suggested he'd like to see Huntington Gardens and Library again, so we may plan that soon.

Ron:

FINALLY! I'm excited! My surgery date has been determined: July 17. Waiting for my hernia problem to go away by skilled surgeon's hands has been a process only the bearer of a hernia can understand. Yippy! It will be – soon over!

At least this time (Yes, second hernia...) they will let me sleep throughout the medical procedure. The "being awake experience" was a story all unto itself! The dreaded part to any surgery is the "healing time". (A Note: All prayers are welcome.)

Ron asked me to include a Bible study I wrote last year, "Immorality". He was reading it, got excited and said, "Everybody should read this, especially people at church."

So, I present it to you again. Click on the word Immorality. This is a PDF file.

As always, please remember, if you don't want to receive these newsletters, PLEASE let me know and I'll take your name off the list.

Brilliancy from Ron the Turtle:

If waiting in a medical building's waiting area for my doctor' appointment is referred to as "get with the program," wouldn't one think hors d'oeuvres and champagne should be part of the package/program? My arrival time: 1:50; appointment time: 2 pm. It is now 2:15; it is now 2:30. And now it's 2:45! Now... 2:55!! My name is finally called!

I'm taken to a small room to wait. I wait and wait! A nurse comes in for a few minutes to do stuff, but then takes me to "yet" another small room... to wait! I wait and wait! Finally, in comes the doctor. He's in and out. I never had a chance to ask, "How's the wife and kids?"

Now, wouldn't it had been nicer, more relaxing and pleasanter, if one would have started out in the main waiting area with complimentary snacks like Hors d'oeuvres and champagne? And in each small waiting room, chocolate covered strawberries, would have been nice. Oh, and of course more bubbly! Please, keep the bubbly a-flowin'! Now, that's the spirited-way to "get with the program" – and like it!

(Oh, by the way, I feel like "goin' bungee jumpin"! Should I feel this way when I have an upcoming hernia surgery? Go figure...)

A Turtle Report: I was just-now thinking: It can be quite challenging (in a frightening way) for a turtle in China Town. I saw crated turtles near the crawdads, fish and fresh figs. Panicky, the cute, little tykes and gals peaked out between the slats, viewing scary passersby. I wanted to stop to purchase the entire crateful and then, quite hurriedly, let them loose in Echo Park's tranquil "lily padded" waterway.
